

YELLOW FEVER STIRS THE SOUTH

New Orleans Reports No Improvement In The Local Conditions.

THOROUGH CLEANING FOR THE CITY

The State Board Of Health Takes Precautions As To The Sanitary Conditions That Exist There.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

New Orleans, La., July 25.—The yellow fever situation shows no improvement. An official statement by Dr. Edmund Souchon, president of the state board of health, stated there had been six deaths and seventeen cases of yellow fever reported up to Monday night. All the state of Mississippi has declared a rigid quarantine against Louisiana.

So far as known there has been no rapid spread of the disease, and the drastic measures of the health officers in the city, state, and marine hospital service, are succeeding. Heads of all these departments declared they believed the disease could be literally stamped out right where it exists, and that there will be no general spread over the city.

State Board Is Busy.

The state board of health took stringent action in several directions looking to the stamping out and confining of the disease. It has all the money at its command that can possibly be used. One hundred street cleaners were put to work by Commissioner of Public Works Smith, and the night force will also be operated with shovels, brooms, and flushers. The Italian and old French quarters are being scrubbed from end to end, and windows and doors are being screened. An order was issued by the state board to all physicians of the city, instructing that every suspicious case be promptly reported so that quick action can be had, and that the moment a suspicious case develops the patient be screened and all methods applied in Havana be utilized.

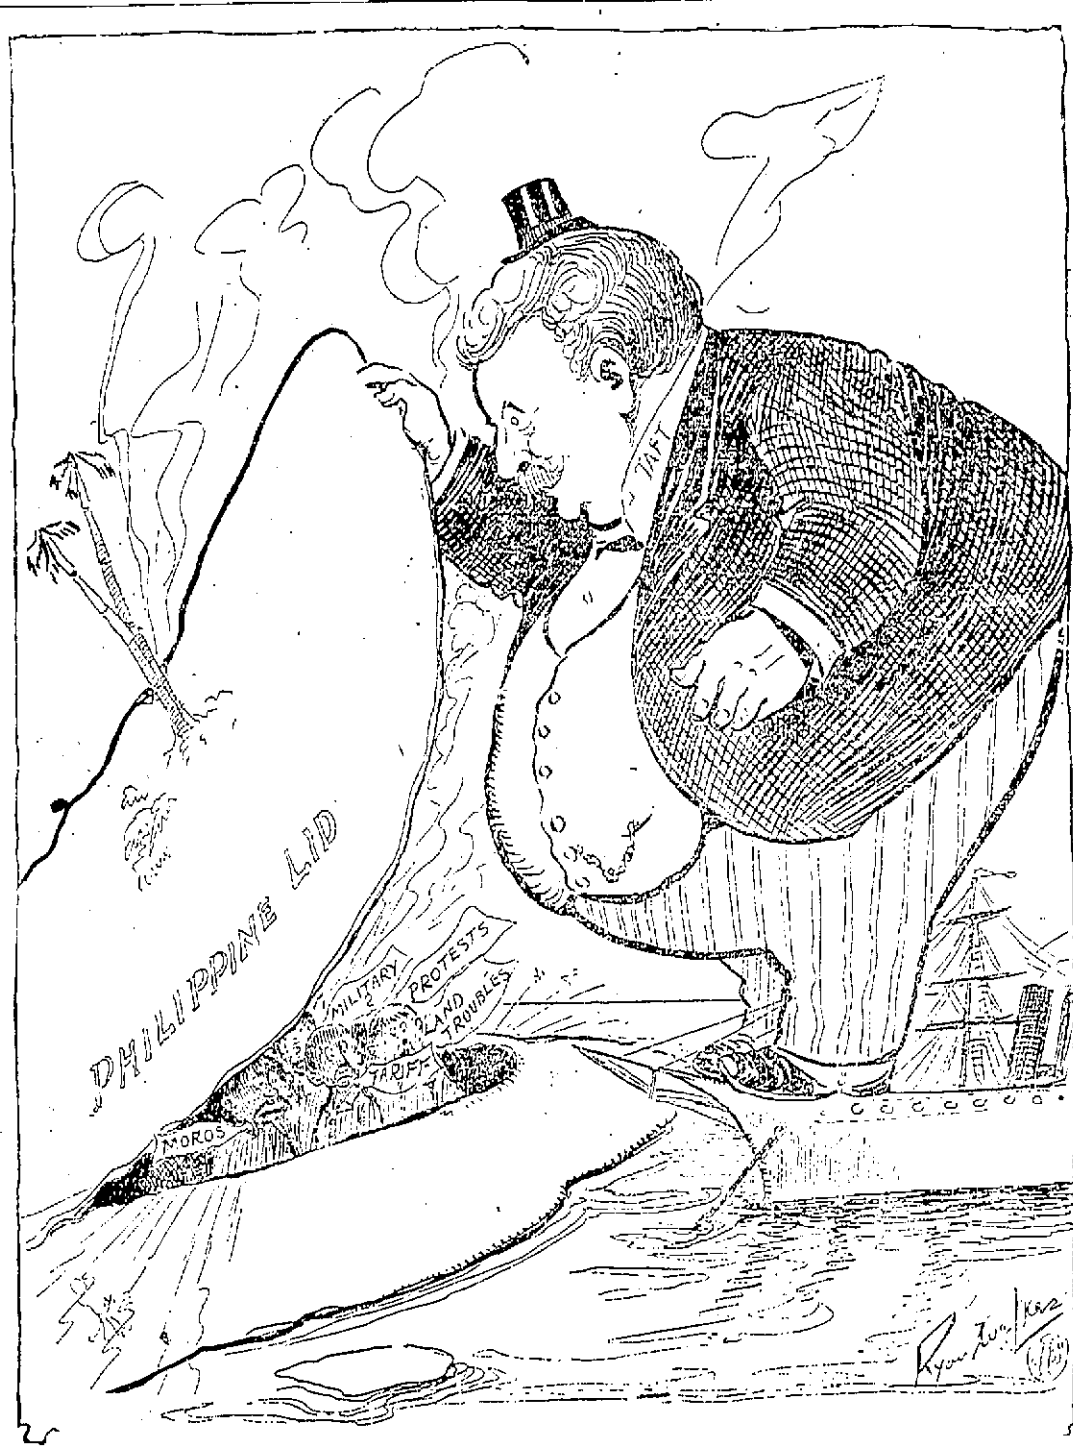

Fruit Steamers Cut Off.

Resolutions were adopted by the board practically putting fruit steamers out of business. It was ordered that these steamers must be six days out from any Central American port before being allowed to land at New Orleans.

Mayor Behrman issued a proclamation calling upon people to take the situation in their own hands, urging them to clean their premises, use strong disinfectants and by all means to screen their residences with mosquito-proof netting.

The mosquito theory of transmission of yellow fever is being declared by every one this year, the first time it has been put forward in fighting the disease in New Orleans. Mayor Behrman urges that oil be poured on the surface of standing water to kill all mosquito larvae that are bred there.

Dr. Taber, head health officer of Texas, issued an imperative demand upon the Texas and Pacific and the Southern Pacific railroads that fairly stunned them. Texas has denied the privilege of passengers from New Orleans to pass through that state under any conditions.

BARON KOMURA IN NEW YORK

Arrives In Gotham This Morning After His Flying Trip From Japan.

IS ANXIOUS TO END THE CONFLICT

They Are Not Certain Just What Will Be The Outcome Of The Coming Conference With Russia's Envoys.

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPPS-M'RAE.]

New York, July 25.—Baron Komura and party arrived at 9:45 this morning. Within half an hour they were in conference with Minister Takahira at the Waldorf-Astoria. They will prepare their plans for the meeting with the President and go over the work ahead of them at Portsmouth. Komura will probably remain in New York about five days. He is somewhat exhausted by his flying trip from Japan.

Japan Anxious for Peace.

"We are anxious for peace," said Y. Sato, minister resident and chief of the foreign office staff, to whom Baron Komura referred the pointed question, "but we will not conclude peace at any price," and M. Sato smiled broadly and meaningfully as he said: "I might say, since I have been asked, that if we settle it will be at a fair price."

"We are not over-arguing as to the success of the coming meeting with the Russian envoys, but we are willing to make some compromises in the name of peace and are pleased to note that M. Witte has been made chief of the czar's plenipotentiaries. He is of large caliber, and though we had but little faith in the commission as originally named, with him at the head it seems more probable that the conference will be conducted in complete good faith."

Future of Korea.

Speaking of the probable effect of the war upon Japanese immigration and America's attitude toward it.

Baron Komura said he believed the opening up of Korea would mean the turning of immigration in that direction.

"With a Japanese protectorate over Korea that country will be rapidly developed," he said, "and thousands of laborer will be needed for it. Then, despite the war, the internal development in our own country is going on rapidly, and as soon as the war has been concluded that development will be greatly accelerated."

Makes Amusing Mistake.

Baron Komura was greatly interested in the city's corporation counsel, who appeared at the depot to welcome him clad in a gray frock coat, crisp creased trousers, white flannel waistcoat, and shiny new gloves. Colonel Lewis addressed him in French, having forgotten that the Baron is a graduate of Yale and a master of English.

"Are you that mayor of which we have heard so much?"

"No," answered the vision in whiskers; "I represent the mayor in his welcome which he has asked me to extend to you."

"Ah!" said the Baron; "then maybe you are that mayor's son."

"No, you are wrong again," assured James Hamilton, as in his finest lavender language he hastened to explain at length the duties and emoluments of the corporation counsel's office.

The committee recommends that in the event of a dissolution, Sweden insist on a neutral zone between the two countries in which there will be no fortifications; and that transit of trade be unobstructed; and that Sweden be freed from responsibility for Norway to other states.

MADISON VOTING FOR A NEW HIGH SCHOOL

Special Election Is Being Held Today to Decide the Ques- tion.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., July 25.—The city of Madison is holding a special election today on the proposition to issue $250,000 of bonds for the erection of a new high school building. The campaign has been exceptionally fierce, at times bitter and personal, and both sides are expressing confidence in the outcome. Close observers say that the opposition to the proposition will carry the day, but much depends upon the vote of the women, who, according to an opinion of the city attorney, are entitled to be counted. The correctness of this opinion is disputed by the opposition to the bond issue, and they declare that if it be shown that the vote of the women carries the measure they will go into court and litigate the question of whether or not the women are qualified to vote. In the arguments the city of Janesville has been frequently quoted by both sides, the pro high school people saying that Janesville built a new high school for an aggregate cost of some $90,000 and argued that it was not nearly large enough, and the opposition citing Janesville's school as an example of a complete and modern building for less than half the sum proposed to be spent in Madison. They charge that the board of education has gone high school mad and that the success of the proposition would plunge the city into debt beyond hope of ever paying.

The defendant also made a motion of a writ of error and filed bonds for two thousand dollars pending an appeal to the supreme court. The court stated that it did not impose the full penalty owing to the fact that the defendant would be deprived forever of all right to hold public office as a part of the punishment.

MEASURES THAT FAILED TO PASS

WERE CONSPICUOUS FEATURES OF COUNCIL MEETING.

SCIENCE OF CEMENT WALKS

Is Unknown in Janesville, According to H. H. Blanchard—He Quotes Postmaster Nowlan as Authority.

All of the aldermen were in their seats when Mayor Hutchinson called the city council to order last evening. The usual bills and resolutions were reported and discussed. Considerable attention was devoted to streets and sidewalks. Alderman Murray, chairman of the street assessment committee, reported on the amounts due the contractors, Ely & Dunn, for brick paving work on South Main from South First to Milwaukee street and on East Milwaukee from South Main to Division; also for paving between street car tracks. He likewise reported the assessment of benefits and damages to property holders on these thoroughfares as assigned by the same committee. The plans for water, gas and sewer services pipes on Milwaukee avenue, which is to be repaired between East and Harrison streets, were also submitted and they were accompanied by a resolution requiring owners of abutting property to lay these pipes within ten days after published notice on penalty of having the work done by the city and charged to them.

Sidewalks and Crossings.

Bids for the construction of the sidewalks and curbing to be installed on the public library property and in front of the voting booth on Racine street were opened and G. B. Cannon's proposition of $159.65, being the lower of the two complete ones, was accepted. The street commissioner was instructed by orders introduced to build brick crosswalks on Walker street on the west side of Prairie avenue; at the intersection of Caroline and Glen on Center street; on the north side of School street; on the north side of Prospect ave. to Glen. The city engineer was requested to prepare a sidewalk grade for the southern part of East street. Permission was given the owner of lot 5, Shumway & McKee's addition to build a 400 foot walk in front of his property on Oakland ave. By an order the city clerk was instructed to draw an order on the treasurer for $500 due Contractor M. J. Benson for the balance of the work in sewer district 12. By another order it was stipulated that the city should buy from Ely & Dunn some 6,000 paving brick remaining in the yards after they had finished their contract.

Measures Held Up.

Several measures introduced were blocked and either held over for investigation or killed. One of them calling on the city clerk to purchase for the sum of $32.65 two sewer-clevers which had been built in the city for the use of the contractors, raised the question as to whether they were in good condition and would fill the bill. When asked regarding the matter, Engineer Kerch stated that the contractors had secured such an outfit but he added significantly that they had never used it. The council decided to refer the matter to the sewerage committee. Following this an order was introduced calling on the City Water Co. to extend their mains on Palm street from Ravine to Pleasant street. This immediately brought forth the inquiry as to how many hydrants would be needed. One every 400 feet was the answer. The extension would be about 600 feet. Alderman Fish said that he had it from the chief engineer that fire protection entirely adequate could be furnished from Chatham street. There was one block without a single house. What the residents really wanted, he understood, was drinking water in their homes. Ald. Jackman thought the city ought to have hydrants at $75 per year. On motion of Ald. Merritt the order was laid over until the next meeting. Ald. Fish then introduced an order instructing the street commissioner to repair Ravine street on the east side from Washington to Chatham with crushed stone. Ald. Jackman immediately interposed an objection, stating that he understood that the city attorney had held it illegal to repair a street not macadamized with that material. Ald. Fish wanted to know how it happened that this very thing was done on a part of the thoroughfare in question last year and silence fell. The silence was punctuated with a few audible chuckles which indicated that the council had not acted within the law at that time. The city attorney, not being in the city, could not be called upon for a further statement and the matter was laid on the table.

H. H. Blanchard Heard.

The Electric Light Co. was directed by an order to install a 50-candle power light at the archedway on Western avenue, a similar lamp on Gold street at the C. & N. W. crossing, and an arc light at the corner of Pleasant and Pine streets. H. H. Blanchard was granted ten minutes time to address the council. He thought that great injustice had been done him by the issuance of an order for a cement walk in front of his property.

A WOMAN TO BE PRETTY

Must Have Luxuriant and Glossy Hair, No Matter What Color.

The finest contour of a female face, the sweetest smile of a female mouth, looses something if the head is crowned with scant hair. Scant and falling hair, it is now known, is caused by a parasite that burrows into the scalp to the root of the hair, where it saps the vitality. The little white scales the germ throws up in burrowing are called dandruff. To cure dandruff permanently, then, and to stop falling hair, that germ must be killed. Newbro's Herpicide, an entirely new result of chemical laboratory, destroys the dandruff germ, and, of course, stops the falling hair, and prevents baldness. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

erty on Palm and Ravine streets. There was little travel in that section and the board walk with the repairs he had put on it would be adequate until spring, at least. The first intimation he had received of the city's intention to compel him to put in a cement walk had come from Mr. Hilt who approached him with a proposition for building it. He was afraid that this kind of work was being crowded along too fast with improper supervision. The central part of the city ought to be well in hand before the outlying districts were compelled to fall in line. Then, again, he was afraid of the kind of cement walks that were being built in this city. Concrete was safer. He had it from Oscar Nowlan that the science of mixing cement was unknown to a single sidewalk builder in Janesville. The lots yielded him no revenue and he had recently been compelled to pay $45 for grading done against his desire. In conclusion he urged that the board walk be allowed to stand until spring.

Stone Crusher Again.

With regard to the stone crusher Ald. Dulin said he would like to ask why so many men were kept there when no work was ordered. Ald. Murray suggested that the men were blasting out rock for the Milwaukee avenue job and Ald. Dulin retorted that the bins were all filled; that it only took two days to fill them. He could not understand why a superintendent and engineer were kept there when there was nothing to do. He could produce witnesses to show that on at least one day last week the stone crusher crew was loaned out to a farmer to help him in his haying. Ald. Jackman moved that a committee be appointed to investigate the matter and report. Mayor Hutchinson appointed Aldermen Sheridan, Brockhaus, and Dulin as the members of this committee.

Kenyon is Vindicated.

Ald. Jackman, chairman of the special committee appointed at the preceding meeting to ferret out the merits of the controversy that had arisen between Poor Commissioner Kenyon and the Phelps family regarding the disposal of the body of an infant, said that the committee had been unable to determine that anyone was to blame. The county had buried two babies for this family and was to bury the third but the cashier Mr. Kenyon offered to provide did not suit the Phelps people. It was possible that the officer might sometimes err on the side of economy but the many applications which came to him from impostors must be taken into consideration. The whole fault lay in the system by which a county board was enabled to take the care of a city's poor out of the city's hands. In the instance in question, Mr. Kenyon has $3,200 for disbursement and of this amount Janesville contributes $1,250. In addition thereto, in accordance with a special law, it also pays annually, to this fund $50 for each saloon license, amounting to $2,500 in all. The whole contribution of the city annually for poor relief is therefore $3,750. Of this amount $2,450 is expended in relieving its poor. Hence the city gets back $1,300 less than it puts in. The remedy rests in the state legislature and the board of supervisors. There is no power in the council.

Library Board Appointments.

The mayor reappointed Mrs. Ogden H. Fethers, Horace McElroy, and William Bladen as members of the library board. Ald. Brockhaus reported that the parks were in excellent condition. A move to accept Hermant Lichtfuss' bid for supplying the city with 60 tons of coal—egg at $8.45, pea at $6.45, and Hocking Valley at $5.50, was defeated owing to the fact that one bidder had offered a lower price on ten tons of one variety of the fuel, and new bids were called for. The chief engineer was authorized to purchase one fire alarm box and locate the same at the intersection of Riverside and South Jackson streets; also to purchase one self recording water pressure gauge and locate the same at the West Side fire station. The report of the assistant street commissioner on new walks needed was adopted. A petition was received from property holders on the Delavan road for an extension of the water mains to Sharon street and the installation of another hydrant.

OUTLINED PLANS FOR $25,000 ADDITION

Janesville Machine Co. Received Formal Permission of Council To Go Ahead.

Permission for making the extensive improvements now under way at the Janesville Machine Co's plant was formally asked for and granted by the council last evening. They include the raising of the one-story building now on the corner of Franklin and Pleasant streets another story in height; the building of a one-story brick addition to the same, 120x48 feet, on the yard side between the present blacksmith shop and the said Franklin street building; the erection of a one-story brick addition to their present foundry on River street, 88x73 feet; the building of a truss for a trolley system across River street from the foundry addition to the warehouse on the west side of River street; the truss to be 24 feet above River street and the supports erected on the outer edge of the sidewalk, 5 ft., 2 inches from the building line and to be 50 ft., 8 inches between supports. Milliken, superintendent of the works.

BEGINS SUIT ON A DIFFERENT CHARGE

Governor Means to Make the Railways Pay Up What He Thinks they Owe.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Madison, Wis., July 25.—The third set of so-called La Follette bills between the state of Wisconsin and the railroad companies will be started within a few days. H. W. Chynoweth, whom Governor La Follette has appointed to assist his attorney-general, has prepared summons and complaint against the Northwestern, St. Paul, Wisconsin Central, Omaha, and "Soo" roads for the recovery of alleged sums of unpaid and wrongfully withheld taxes, withheld by reason of the alleged incomplete and erroneous reports of gross earnings submitted by the companies for the purpose of taxation on the license fee system. The complaint does not stipulate the exact sums alleged to be due the state, but demands judgment that the roads be compelled to produce their books and accounts so that a complete accounting and repayment may be had. It is charged by the attorney for the governor that not a single report of gross earnings has been free from errors and omissions. The first state-railroad litigation was brought to recover the $10,000 penalties from the railroads for the incorrectness of their annual reports, and Judge Stevens, formerly the La Follette leader in the assembly, rendered a decision against the companies. This decision will go to the supreme court for review. The railroads are in court protesting against the ad valorem railroad taxation law and seeking to have that statute declared unconstitutional on the ground that it trespasses upon the provinces of the interstate commerce law.

Women Should Make Drudges Of Themselves For Sake Of Economy.

Mr. Editor: Those two words, simple enough, to attract but little attention except to the housewives, in whom, in many cases, the words excite a mind problem of great perplexity to solve. To the woman, who is a keeper at home, the helpmeet of her husband, these words are of no moment. Now, to the party of the first part, who entertains the belief, that she really needs a hired girl, and is staggered in her efforts to obtain one whose qualifications even approach the standard desired, would you not counsel her to change her thoughts, and propound to herself the following questions: "Do I need a hired girl? Can not I arrange my work to a simplification to eliminate its present complications? Will it not be a great saving to my patient, hard-working, good husband, to dispense with a hired girl, so long as we are all happy? Can not I make this housekeeping drudgery (as commonly called) a pleasant occupation, a sphere of my calling? Can not we make less going, less late hours, earlier rising, earlier breakfast, earlier dinner and tea, less of useless variety of dishes, and consequently less dishes to wash, once weekly sweeping, and that I can always hire done? And finally, can not I revolutionize my manner of housekeeping in 49 ways, to my better health of mind and body?" Faith will remove mountains. I have faith that I can accomplish much in those matters. After this soliloquizing, I will sleep on it, and decide on the feasibility of the same.

Now, sir, we don't know much about housekeeping as done today—yet we do. Woman's work is all to man—she is the maker of the home, and the home is the making of the man, and his children. The keeper at home is our ideal of a wife; the keeper at home is in no way disturbed by the hired girl craze. Servants are essential in thousands of cases—no discussion on that point, but in 48 cases out of 50 the hired girl is an expensive and unnecessary appendage and cumbersome, and in majority of cases is sought for more to keep up with the neighbors. In style than necessity demands.

The cost of keeping a good ordinary girl today is $30 per month—$360 per year "and up." Now, sir, this concerns only the party of the first part. When she awakens and tells her happy and profitable experience of a month without a hired girl, it may put some good wives to thinking, and adopting the "simple life," to their happiness and prosperity—then you know the saying about the two blades of grass, will be all intended here.

The writer for a few years past, has lived mostly with a family of four, regularly, with some company and visits from relatives quite frequently, some few quiet evenings at evening sociables—large eleven-room house, an invalid to care for some of the time, meals, 7, 12, 6 sharp the year round; large, elegantly neat, plain airy rooms, unpretentiously furnished—no hired girl, work plenty; easily handled; inmates lend a helping hand at everything needed. No drones in camp; none obliged to answer to a call for help, and still get the money. A plain, easy breakfast, few dishes, work usually out of the way at 8 o'clock, and ladies at their work, ordinary. No hired girl in the way, and none to pay. No intent here to discourage the hired girl. Sunday, for example, that family rises as early as any day in the year, all good people should do so, we think. Meals same hours as week days, because there is even more to do on Lord's Day morning than other days, but the rest comes in the refreshing duties of the change, and bath and quiet easy time taken by the forelock—the walk before or after breakfasting the fast—then to read or rest, and promptly to church, or else, where, as conscience may dictate. Time of their own, and to spare.

The duty of the day well done, a refreshing night's rest, a new-made day with all its cares and perplexities, with refreshed armor to combat.

Now, sir, when the party of the first part awakens, from the imaginative sleep, can not you believe that her musings were "my faith is stronger now; I will try to do my anxious contemplations?" "I see more already of a wife's duty to fulfill the mission for which all women are commissioned, to be a keeper at home, and care for my husband's children." "The independence I will have will more than compensate my present dilemma." "Dependence is a sorrow." "The rainy day comes to all." "We must see cover now, by economy." "Our home mission is a good field to work in."

When is the time to doff and don our winter garments in this climate? Can you climb it? Easy! Doff May 31 and don June 1.

Yours very sincerely,

CITIZEN.

SANDALS ARE TO FASHIONABLE.

Eastern Market Has Large Stock and They are Becoming a Fad. Sandals are to be the fashionable footwear according to the prediction of leading manufacturers of the country who declare that the past few weeks more than a million sandals have been manufactured in the eastern factories and shipped to all parts of the United States. Children have worn the sandal but the older people are now taking to the new styles and the trade is stocking largely with them. As yet Janesville people are not extensively adopting to the sandal fashion, but if the fad is extended the skeleton form of footwear will become very popular here.

General Railway Notes.

As a part of its terminal project in this city, the Pennsylvania railroad is going to build a church, parish house and parochial school at an estimated cost of about a half million dollars. The new structures will cover a large plot running through from Thirty-third to Thirty-fourth street, just west of Ninth avenue, and when completed will be turned over to St. Michael's Roman Catholic church. It was generally supposed when the railroad bought this property several months ago from the church that the deal was ended, but it now turns out that the sale was affected only on condition that this railroad should supply similar buildings on another plot somewhere in the neighborhood. To carry out this plan the Pennsylvania took title recently to five flat houses, which are to be torn down to make way for the church structures.

Four hours and a half from Boston to New York and vice versa is the promise of the New Haven railroad, when all the new bridge work on the line is finished and the four track section at Bridgeport is in operation. This will give an average speed of a trifle over 51 hours, including all stops and slowdowns. It is thought that the New York-Boston line will be ready for the flyers in about nine months.

The Kentucky Railroad Commission holds that under section 218 of the constitution of the state, express companies doing business in the state are common carriers, and that it is within the province of the commission to regulate their rates when complained of as exorbitant.

An electric railway to connect the Mexican cities of Guanajuato and Toluca is to be built soon. It will be a short, but profitable line, as each of the terminal points is the center of a rich community of numerous and increasing industries. The former is surrounded and underlain by untold mineral wealth and the latter is the seat of an exceptionally rich agricultural and fruit belt. First class equipment is to be supplied by American firms which will soon be contracted for.

Shoe merchants of Augusta, Ga., have announced their intention of fighting the discriminating freight rates of the railroads entering that city by using the river steamers, the rate being thirty-one cents cheaper than that of the railroads.

Differential competitors of the Michigan Central are unanimous in saying that the present fight has not been productive of any appreciable increase in business. The cut of $2 which has been made in the rate from Chicago to New York does not appear to have induced any body to make the trip who would not otherwise have gone. As the relative situation has not been affected to any extent, it would seem to be a ruthless waste of revenue to prolong the fight.

Minnesota's new law, making the sale of interchangeable mileage compulsory, has developed a fatal defect in that it does not describe what mileage really is. The railroads have anticipated the situation by discontinuing the sale of non-transferable mileage tickets.

It is said that the railroad merger planned for the Cripple Creek district is designed to include all the electric companies, which would give the railroad company the monopoly of the lighting as well as furnishing power to the mining companies.

The Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line has issued a series of beautiful views of the Yellowstone Park, which are being distributed to patrons in the East. They consist of pictures in colors of the many geysers in the National Park and show the many other attractions of that famous reservation.

FIREMEN AND POLICE SALARIES EQUALIZED

By Increasing the Pay of the Former at the Meeting of the Council Last Evening.

On recommendation of the fire and water committee at the council meeting last evening Alderman Council introduced an amendment to the ordinance fixing the salaries of the police and firemen and after it had been given its first and second readings, moved that the rules be suspended and that it be advanced to its third reading and placed on passage. Both motions prevailed. The schedule of salaries as now arranged is as follows:

Police Department. City Marshal—$100 per month. Oldest patrolman in service—$75 per month. All other patrolmen—$60 per month.

Fire Department. Chief Engineer—$100 per month. Assist. Engineer—$150 per year. Firemen 1st year in service—$55 per month. Firemen 2nd year in service—$60 per month. Firemen 3rd year in service—$65 per month. Callroom—$100 each per year.

Raise for Firemen.

There is no change in the amended ordinance in the salaries of the police officials nor is that of the chief of the fire department affected. The ordinary firemen simply receive a raise of $5 in salaries. When they begin work they are receiving $5 less than the policeman but upon and after their third year of service they are receiving $5 more. The two departments are thereby placed on an equal, or nearly equal, basis. It was urged that the firemen performed quite as important and necessary service as the patrolmen and that they were on duty much longer each day.

FOREIGN COMMERCE.

The foreign commerce of the United States in the fiscal year just ended exceeds that of any preceding year, having been $2,635,970,333, in comparison with $2,451,914,642 in 1904, the previous record year.

An analysis of the statistics of foreign commerce during the year ending June 30, 1905, just prepared by the Department of Commerce and Labor through its Bureau of Statistics, shows that both imports and exports made new high records, imports having exceeded by 92 million dollars the total recorded in 1903, and exports having for the first time surpassed the figures of 1901. In 1903 imports first passed the billion dollar limit, with a total of $1,025,719,237; in 1904 they again fell below one billion dollars in value, being $991,087,371, and for the year just ended are $1, 117,507,500. Exports first rose above one billion dollars in value during the fiscal year 1892, but fell below that limit in the following year, and so remained until 1897, when the total was $1,050,993,556. In 1898 the total exports were $1,231,482,330; in 1900, $1,394,483,082; in 1901, $1,487,764,991, a total which was not again equaled until 1905, when the figures stood at $1,518,462,833, not only surpassing the record made in 1901, but for the first time in the history of our commerce passing the one-and-a-half billion-dollar limit.

An unusual feature of the statistics of the fiscal year 1905 is the very small increase in customs revenue, despite the very great increase in dutiable imports. The year's imports were valued at $1,117,507,500, as against $991,087,371 in the preceding year, an increase of $126,420,129. The imports of dutiable merchandise during 1905 were valued at $600,071,238, as against $536,967,131 in 1904, an increase of $63,114,107. Despite this fact, however, the customs revenue derived from the largely increased dutiable imports of 1905 is less than $1,000,000 in excess of that derived from the imports of 1904, being $262, 060,518 for 1905, as against $201,274, 505 for 1904. This decrease in customs revenue is in part due to the admission of Cuban products, especially sugar and tobacco, at a reduction of 20 per cent from the regular tariff rates, under the reciprocity treaty of December 27, 1903, and in part to the unusually large amount of dutiable merchandise remaining in warehouse at the end of the year upon which duty had not been paid, as well as to several other causes which can not be fully stated until complete details of the year's imports are available.

Details of commerce for the twelve months are not in all cases available, but a careful examination of the complete figures for the eleven months affords an opportunity to determine the articles in which the principal increases or decreases occur.

On the import side the largest increases occur in the classes "manufactured materials, wholly or partially manufactured," in which the figures will be about 70 million dollars in advance of those for the preceding year, and in "luxuries and other articles of voluntary use," which seem likely to be more than 15 million dollars in excess of the figures of 1904.
"Articles of food and animals" have increased by over 45 millions, and "manufactured articles ready for consumption" have fallen off about 4 million dollars as compared with 1904.
These figures indicate the increasing ability of the United States to supply its manufactures and its growing reliance upon other countries for certain of its food products and materials for use in the manufacturing industries. This view is strengthened by an examination of the statistics of articles imported. The principal articles which showed decreased importations during the eleven months ending with May 1905, as compared with the corresponding period of the preceding year were manufactured articles, including chemicals, cotton goods, feathers, fibre manufactures, glass and glassware, iron and steel manufactures and wool manufactures.
Tea, cocoa, and vegetables were the only important food products to show a decrease, while the importations of breadstuffs, coffee, fish, fruits and nuts, provisions (including meat and dairy products) spices, and sugar were materially larger than those of the preceding year. Raw and partially manufactured articles imported for use as manufacturer's materials show increased importations, especially copper, cotton, undressed furs, india rubber, lead, paper stock, raw silk, tin, unmanufactured tobacco, unman-ufactured wood and unmanufactured wool. Coal importations are about 1½ million dollars below the figures of last year.

On the export side there is a decrease of over 53 million dollars in agricultural products, but this is more than offset by a large increase in exports of manufactures. The less important classes, show a slight net decrease as compared with 1904.

The articles showing the largest increases in exportations during the eleven months of 1905 for which details are available are: Corn, an increase of 16 million dollars, as compared with the corresponding period of 1904; copper manufactures, an increase of 25 millions, about one-third being in exports to China, where large amounts of copper are in demand for coinage purposes; cotton manufactures, an increase of 22 millions, principally in exports of cotton cloths to China; raw cotton, an increase of 9 millions (during the twelve months); iron and steel manufactures, an increase of 23 millions; hops, 2 and one-third millions; leather and manufactures thereof, 3 millions; oil cake and meal, 4 millions; oils mineral and vegetable, 5 millions; rice, 2 millions; spirits, wines and malt liquors, an increase of a half million dollars; tobacco manufactures, a little more than a half million dollars; and wood manufactures, an increase of less than a half million dollars. The principle articles showing decreased exports are wheat, a reduction of 32 millions (twelve months' figures); wheat flour, 23 millions (twelve months' figures); fruits and nuts, 5 millions; provisions, 5 millions (twelve months' figures); and unmanufactured wood, a decrease of 6½ millions. The reduction in exports of wheat and wheat flour was due in part to the inadequacy of the domestic crop to furnish any considerable surplus over the home requirements and in part to unusually large crops in foreign wheat-producing countries. Exports from the United States of wheat, during the fiscal year just ended, have been even lower than the year before. In the two foremost European grain markets, the British and the German, the leading position has been taken by wheat of Russian and Argentine origin, wheat imports from the United States showing unusually low figures for the period under consideration.

Imports into the United States were in the year just ended, 12 times as much as in 1880, and exports from the United States about 2½ times as much as in that year. The actual increase in imports since 1880 has been 1,026 millions, and in exports 1,448 millions. Imports have doubled during the last 25 years, having been $445,777,775 in 1879, as against $1,117, 507,500 in 1905. Exports, however, have doubled in 16 years, the figures of 1889 having been $742,401,375 and those of the year just ended $1,518, 462,833, according to the preliminary report just issued by the Bureau of Statistics.

Fond du Lac Commonwealth: The

in connection with the United States navy since the wrecking of the Maine.
If, as the dispatches state, the boiler, then an awful responsibility rests upon some one for the criminal care-serious injury of many others.

naturally, and those who weren't hurt first off tried to quench the flames with more buckets of gasoline; more eral Italians.

Milwaukee Free Press: The "alleged" fact that Stollberg & Co. paid Supervisor Hartung $1,500 for a $5,000 job of county plumbing, and then paid him $150 more for getting his claim allowed by the county board, does not of itself prove that the plumbing business is all that has been said of it; but it is certainly suggestive of it; and of some other things. It suggests that if all plumbers charge enough more than the work is worth to enable them to pay a matter of 33 per cent for "influence" in getting the work and afterwards collecting the pay for it, people are paying a good deal more for their work than they should.

Howling "Here Am I!"
Whitewater Register: That wobbly structure, the Wisconsin college of reform, is showing many signs of growing shakiness. The "reformers" are having hard times among themselves respecting the division of the rewards of virtue. There is a great host who feel that "devotion to the welfare of the plain, common people deserves individual reward in the way of valuable official or pecuniary assets in this present world of ours; they dislike to wait till their feet have felt the chill" and damp of Jordan's waters. So, they are hustling like a thousand goings in a pispian gobbling up the stray kornells. Wisconsin could furnish a complete outfit of officials for every state in the whole union, from the list of half breed candidates whose hands are in the air and whose throats are hoarse with howling "Here am I!"
And they are not all going to be easily placated if their "merits" do not receive what they regard as proper recognition. As a sample there is a Milwaukee member of the administration who has had a snug berth for four years, but he wanted one snug-ger and he boldly declared that he should take the lid off and let the public look in and see the corruption and hollow pretense of things as they really are at the capital. He did not get what he demanded and now there is a hot time in trying to make him see that the something else which is offered "is just as good."

Lost Confidence in Him.
An Irish gardener, being discovered stealing, was thus admonished by his employer (also an Irishman): "Pat, ye dirty thief, ye can take a week's notice and go now, for I wouldn't trust ye with an empty sack full of straw!"

RAILWAY RATE PROBLEM

Why Trainmen Oppose Control
by Government Commission.

P. H. MORRISSEY'S EXPLANATION.

No Mercenary Stand, Says Grand Master of Brotherhood of Railroad
Trainmen, For Wage Cutting
Would Not Follow Rate Reduction.
Discriminations and Alleged Rebates, He Says, Come From Trusts.

P. H. Morrissey, grand master of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, discussing at Cleveland, O., with a representative of the New York Globe what he considers the most important matter now before railroad employees, the proposition to regulate railroad rates by a government commission, said:

"The strength of unions has developed in the United States, and particularly that of railroad unions, because of their ability to demonstrate to the railroad officials the soundness of any proposition it may be necessary to present. By care in selection of members and by presenting only proper claims the unions have arrived at a position where the railroad officials respect them the more because they have shown that there is a mutual interest between the railroad management and the unions. It is this mutuality of interest that binds me to depart from our usual custom and discuss this railroad rate regulation, although as a rule I am averse to newspaper controversy.

"Railroad employees cannot expect high wages and reasonable hours unless the railroads are making money.
It has been stated that if rates were reduced, and rate regulation means nothing else, the first reduction in expense would be a cut in wages. This is not so, and proper consideration of the situation will prove it. The railroads realize the necessity of employing intelligent, experienced men and of having them satisfied both with their work and with their wages. Because of a cut in wages would be first, to dissatisfy the employees and make them seek employment elsewhere, and, second, to force the railroad officials to accept in their places men who are inferior both in mechanical work and in judgment, which is a necessity to every man who works on a railroad.

"The railroads would never do this,
if for no other reason than because they appreciate that the pecuniary disadvantages which would result from the employment of incompetent help would more than offset the difference between the wages now paid and those which would be paid if a cut were made. So it is not from the viewpoint of immediate, personal injury that we are earnest in discussing this matter, but from the viewpoint of the greatest good to the greatest number.

"Those of us who have been in the service ten or twenty years remember the hard times of the railroad wars and the cut rate periods. We perhaps better than the shipper, were impressed with the disadvantages resulting therefrom. We had to handle defective cars and attempt to move trains with locomotives which needed repairs. At times and on some railroads we went for months with but part of our pay, and we know how disastrous and disorganizing such a situation is.

In the past ten years we have seen the railroads rebuilt and re-equipped.
We have assisted, in fact, I do not think it is too strong to say we have forced better wages for the men and the employment of a better class of men, and during this time the public has not suffered, because rates have not been increased.

"Because railroads have been able to find the money with which to rebuild tracks and buy new cars and locomotives without raising the rate is no argument that if the rates be reduced they will be able to continue to do so.
We are in constant touch with and know all the patrons of the railroads.
We know the shippers and the travelers, and we know the patrons of the railroads which we serve are satisfied with the present passenger and freight rates. The discriminations which we hear about, the alleged rebates and things of that kind, come principally from the greedy trusts, and we are not overanxious to assist them."

Jeannette Gilder's Cat on Verbs.
Jeannette L. Gilder, editor of the Critic, was at Cleveland, O., a few hours recently on the way to Duluth.
In an interview she startled the reporter by dropping as many verbs as possible, says a Cleveland dispatch to the Chicago Tribune. She said:

"Queer thing about Cleveland. Must be rich city. More automobiles than in New York. So many women drive them, the big ones. Cleveland women of more rugged type than New York women. New York women content to amble about in little electric runabouts. No dash, no go. Great difference here." By the bye, what about the poor horse? One this morning hitched to a dirt wagon. Only one I saw. Poor, bony animal. Sorry for him, honestly."

Japanese on Texas Rice.
Baron Masano-Masadaira, a Japanese nobleman, has been traveling in Texas, which he declares to be a great country for rice. He regards Texas rice as almost on a par with the product of his native country and feels sure that it can be raised there with good profit.
The baron is of opinion that in a reasonably short time many Japanese of wealth and standing will become residents of the Lone Star State.

needs no comment, but sells on its merits. The capitalization of this mine is 28,000 shares; at this low Domestics Are in Demand.

The demand for girls for general housework in Chicago is much larger than the supply. Managers of a number of the large employment bureaus, including the three conducted by the state, say that they are receiving every week more calls for domestics than it is possible for them to fill. The Swedish and Norwegian girl of all work still holds her place in the popular demand.

NO LIGHTS ON MOST OF THE RIVER BOATS

Plain, Common-Sense Precaution Is Neglected by Most of the Skippers, Horseabouts.

Whether or not there is any law compelling crafts navigating the Rock river to carry lights at night has not been ascertained but the skippers who neglect to do so are obviously tempting fate. Of the twenty-five or more smaller launches the ones carrying lamps could be counted on one hand. Some dark night one of these will be run down by one of the larger craft and there will be no one to blame but the foolish captain who gave this plain, common-sense precaution the go-by. Already there have been several close brushes.

REBEKAHS HOLD DISTRICT CONVENTION HERE TODAY

CURRENT NEWS NOTES.

Had Fine Trip: Dr. and Mrs. Edden and Mrs. E. H. Kemmerer returned from their automobile trip to Chicago at 10:30 last evening, having left that city at 2:30 in the afternoon. They were about 74 hours on the road and had a delightful time.

The Sly Chef: Elsewhere in this issue, in the Afton correspondence to particularize, will be found the announcement of the coming wedding of Harry Reeder, chef at the golf club pavilion, and Miss Marie Handell who has been assisting him in the work of refreshing the hungry devotees of the game. The wedding will be solemnized at the home of the intended bride's sister, Mrs. Edward Falter, on August 2. There have been rumors that such an event was a secures contract. John Cullen has secured the contract for the erection of the city hall at Rockford. His bid of over sixty-three thousand was lower than others received. The foundation has already been built on a different contract.

Assessor Crossed Fingers: A prominent citizen this week strove to convince the assessor that he had sold a valuable piece of property to the United Brethren congregation and that the deed would be recorded in a day or two. Church property is exempt from taxation, so Assessor Conrad has been keeping watch of the register of deeds office. The deed has not been filed.

SLUM CHILDREN TO ENJOY FARM LIFE

Twenty From the Jewish and Bohemian Quarter of Chicago, Pass Through on Way to Mineral Point.

Twenty poorly clad children, each with a basket, cheap grip or bundle, whose ages ranged probably from six to twelve and whose faces showed them to be of foreign parentage or birth, caused considerable comment at the St. Paul passenger depot this morning. They were on their way to the Bohemian quarters of Chicago and were on their way to enjoy one of the most delightful events that may ever brighten their lives—a two weeks' outing on a farm. The children have been taken in charge for two weeks by the Chicago Bureau of Charities, working in the Southwestern District, and so to farms near Mineral Point, whose owners or tenants have agreed to entertain them. Miss Roughton, a transient officer, was in charge and the transportation was furnished by the St. Paul railroad company.

Decease on Selling Fish.

Fish, because of its tendency rapidly to decompose, holds a peculiar position among foods. In England it is the subject of a special act of parliament. So long ago as 1698 men knew the evil consequences resulting from eating mackerel of uncertain post-mortem age. So they passed an act providing that except during the hours of divine service this fish could be sold on Sunday. That act has never been repealed.

Sermon Moved the Stones.

This curious tale of the Venerable Bede is told in the medieval "Golden Legend." One day, when he was old and blind, the desire to preach came upon him. An attendant led him to a spot where he faced a heap of stones, and Bede, believing that a human audience was before him, delivered an eloquent sermon. At the end, it is gravely recorded, the stones cried "Amen!"—no doubt to save Bede's feelings.

Lapsed in Meaning.

When menus are written in French by those who are imperfectly acquainted with that language, amusing effects are sometimes produced. For instance, on the front of a small restaurant in Avion, a few days ago there appeared the following surprising item: "Yellow-cake à la gratis. And it isn't a free lunch, either."

ALLEGED SLAYER OF "DICK TIBBETTS" DEAD

Man Who Is Thought to Have Killed Rockford Newsboy Dies in Prison.

Two years ago little Dick Tibbetts, a Rockford newsboy, was murdered and his remains horribly mutilated by an unknown man. The police of Rockford, Beloit and Janesville sought the murderer without any success. Later Emil Walz was arrested in Detroit for a similar crime and sent to state prison. Walz has now paid the penalty for his crime by taking his life with his own hands. Walz, who was utterly depraved and unmanageable, had been caught packing boxes of ninety instead of 100 cigars, and was sent to his cell. Later, when he was summoned to the office, he refused to go and defied the officers to take him, at the same time brandishing a table knife he had stolen and sharpened to a fine point. Picking up a stool, Deputy Catlin stepped into the cell to pinion the man against the wall, and as he did so Walz plunged the knife into his own side. The knife severed a rib and penetrated almost to the heart. After lingering in the hospital until late Saturday afternoon Walz succumbed. Since he had been an inmate of the penitentiary Walz had been a source of annoyance and caused more trouble than the 200 other men.

The command, "That ye love one another," has been fully demonstrated in our home, since our dear loving husband and father entered within the vale, leaving us in a deep shadow. We sincerely think each and all for every deep and abiding expression of love. Trusting the same love may deepen and widen, not only in our own house, but may all with whom we come in contact feel that love, for ye love the world is to be redeemed to righteousness.

Brice Fulfilled Threat.

Senator Brice was an interesting personality, although he never realized his own eccentricities. I was chairman of a house committee in a club some years ago. Brice was on the committee. We met one afternoon for some reason the inkstands had been carried out to the library, where we were holding our deliberations.

"I'll order an inkstand for this club that cannot be taken from the library," said he, with an emphasis that showed deep feeling about the matter. The other members of the committee soon forgot Brice's threat, but three months later, Tiffany's wagon stopped in front of the clubhouse and a silver and black enameled inkstand, more than two feet long and weighing more than ten pounds, was carried to the library. It was said to have cost $1,000.

That was just like Brice—Julian Chambers in Brooklyn Eagle.

Dr. Willard's Dry Feet.

Some years ago Dr. Horace Mann Willard purchased the mansion house and grounds of the Hon. Josiah Quincy at Vollandston, and after making many improvements established a first-class private school for young ladies. One unusually wet spring the doctor noticed quite an epidemic of coughs and colds, and found that many of the young ladies were taking their morning walks without rubbers and getting wet feet, and consequently coughs and colds.

At a convenient time the doctor gave the pupils a lecture on the folly and danger of wet feet, declaring it entirely uncalled for. "Look at me," he said, "I never have a cold, and I haven't wet my feet for more than twenty years."

There was an ominous silence, a giggle, and then a wave of tumultuous laughter swept over the school, and the doctor, realizing his mistake, joined in—Boston Herald.

BIG FIELD MEET AT YOSTS' THURSDAY

Beloit and Janesville K's of P. to Hold Their Annual Picnic That Day.

There is a shortage in the megaphone market in this city. For the past three days the stores of Janesville have been scouring for the long pastedboard and paper mache mouthpieces and the dealers had begun to wonder what the occasion could be. Most prominent among those who were seeking the speaking tubes are the members of the Knights of Columbus. It now develops that there is to be a joint picnic, field meet, and baseball game between the Knights of Beloit and Janesville on next Thursday at Yost's and the megaphones are wanted to increase the local support. The annual joint picnic of the Beloit and Janesville orders has been one of the most important meetings of the summer in this vicinity and this will be no exception. There will be a dinner at noon that will coax the appetites of all the boys. Then will follow the athletic games and the speaking. The baseball game will be the great contest of the day and the Beloit men have every confidence that they will be able to carry away the honors.

CHAPTER I.
THE end of October had been more than usually fine, and now the beginning of November was following the good example set by its predecessor. In the Home park, the only part of the extensive grounds surrounding Hampton Court palace that was well wooded, the leaves had not entirely left the branches and the turf beneath was green and firm, as yet unsoftened by autumnal rain.

Along one of the forest aisles there walked a distinguished party, proceeding slowly, for the pace was set by a disease stricken man whose progress was of painful deliberation. He was tall and thin. His body was prematurely bent, though accustomed to be straight enough if one might judge by the ministerial brow, now pallid with illness, or by the glance of the piercing eye, untamed even by deadly maddening. That he was not long for this earth, if nature had her way, a scrutinizor of that handsome, powerful face might have guessed, yet he was singled out for destruction even before his short allotted time, for at that moment his enemies, hedged in secrecy behind locked doors, were anxiously planning his ruin. They were wise in their privacy, for had a whisper of their intentions gone abroad the Earl of Stratford would have struck first and struck hard, as indeed he intended to do in any case.

Thomas Wentworth, earl of Stratford, was accompanied by an imposing train. On either side of him, accompanying his slow steps to his, were some of the highest in the land, who waited on his words and accorded him a deference more obsequious than that with which they might have distinguished the king himself, for all knew that this shattered frame was more to be dreaded than the most stalwart personage who that day trod English soil.

Behind this noble cortege followed a numerous band of attendants, alert for look or call, each having place according to his degree. A huntsman was surrounded by dogs kept in thrall by fear of the whip. Falconers with hooded hawks attested a favorite sport of the earl, who loved to have the birds near him even though he made no trial of their flight. And here he walked the grounds of the king as if he owned them; as though he were permanent master instead of transient guest. Here he rested for the moment, hoping to recover some remnant of health by the placid Thames, after his troublous journey from Ireland, which turbulent country lay numb under his strong hand, soon to be vocal enough when the bounds were upon him. No echo of London's clamor came to this green paradise. He knew the mob was crying out against him, as in truth the whole country cried, but he headed not the howl, despising his opponents. Better for him had been more wary or more conciliatory.

Among those now in his company was young De Courcy, one of the numerous band of Frenchmen smilingly received at court because the consort of Charles had a predilection for her countrymen—a preference unshared by any save her husband. The French contingent thought little of the scowls of the English so long as those in authority smiled on them and the smile brought profit. They were regarded as titled mercenaries, spies probably, anxious to feather their own nests at the expense of the treasury, possibly the propagating agents of a church of which England had a deep distrust, certainly possessing an overweening influence at court, dividing still further the unfortunate king from his suspicious people.

It might have been imagined that so thoroughly English, so strenuous, a man as Stratford, the last to be deluded by suave manners or flattery, although he had an insatiable appetite for cringing deference, yet unimpaired by it (as witness his crushing of Lord Montmorris in Ireland), would have shown scant friendship for frivolous French nobles, but it was a fact that he bore from young De Courcy a familiarity of address that he would have suffered from none other in the kingdom.

Counters find a ready reason for every action, and they attributed Stratford's forbearance to the influence De Courcy possessed with the queen, for his lordship was well aware that his sovereign lady showed small liking for the king's most powerful minister. Stratford was too keen a politician not to make every endeavor to placate an enemy who at all hours had access to the private ear of his master, on whose breath depended his own elevation. Therefore it may well be that he thought it worth while to conciliate one of the haughty lady's favorites.

"The conversation under the trees was lightly frivolous, despite the seriousness of the time, Stratford was not one to wear his heart on his sleeve, and it was not that the king insisted on his presence in London, refusing to him permission to return to Ireland, where he was safe—the wielder of the upper hand—his manner or expression gave no hint of his anxiety. A cynical smile curved his bloodless lips as he listened to the chatter of De Courcy, not noticing the silence of the others, who disdained a conversational contest with the voluble Frenchman. "I give your lordship my assurance," insisted the young man, "that his majesty was most perturbed by the incident. All Scots are superstitious, and the king has Scottish blood in his veins."

"As to superstition, I have never learned," said Stratford, speaking slowly, "that the French are entirely free from some touch of it."

"That's as may be," continued De Courcy, "but her majesty, who is French, advised the king to think nothing more of the encounter, so he regards but lightly any predictions of doom from an old gypsy hag."

"There were no predictions of doom and no gypsy hag. The case was of the simplest, now exaggerated by court gossip," amended the earl.

"My lord, I have it almost direct from the king himself."

"Your almost will account for anything. It was merely a piece of youthful impetuosity, which should have been punished by one of the park rangers had any been present. The king had honored me with his company in the park. We were alone together, discussing problems of state, when there suddenly sprang out before us a smiling, forward girl, who cried, 'Merry gentlemen, I will predict your fortunes if it return you to me where I may find the Earl of Stratford.' His majesty looked at me, and the hussy, quick to take a hint, evidently saw that I was the person sought. In any case the king's remark must have confirmed her suspicion. 'Your predictions are like to prove of small value,' said his majesty, 'if you ask such a question. Here you have two men before you. Choose the greater,' whereupon the wench seized my hand before I was aware, and the king laughed."

"It was an uncourtier-like proceeding," said De Courcy. "That young woman will not advance in a world which depends on the smile of the mighty for promotion."

"The choice shows her a true prophet," muttered one of the nobles, but Stratford, paying no heed, went on with his account:

"The words which followed were more diplomatic than the action. 'You are the king's best friend,' she said, examining the palm she had taken. Then his majesty cried, 'What do you read in my hand?' 'You are the king's worst enemy,' said the port hussy. This unplanned Charles for the moment, who replied at last: 'I think you are more successful with my comrade. Read all you find in his palm, I beg of you.' Then the gypsy, if such she was, went glibly on: 'Your fate and that of the king are interwoven. If you overcome your enemies, the king will overcome his; if you fall, the king falls. Your doom will be the king's doom, your safety the king's safety. At the age you shall die, at that age will the king die and from the same cause.' His majesty laughed, but said unwearyingly, 'I thought, but said faintly, 'I have the advantage of you, Stratford, for you may die at any moment, but I am given seven years to live, being that space younger than you.' I was annoyed at the familiarity of the creature and bade her take herself off, which she did after making vain appeal for some private conversation with me."

"Was she fair to look upon? In that case I do not wonder at your indignation. To learn that a handsome and young woman was searching for you in the lonely forest, to meet her at last, but in company of a king so rigid in his morals as Charles, was indeed a disappointment. You had been more favored with any other monarch of Europe beside you. Had you no chance of getting one private word with her, of setting time and place for a more secluded conference? It is my prayer that when next you meet the woodland sylph you are alone in the forest."

As if to show how little profit follows the prayer of a French exilist there stepped out from behind a thick tree in front of them the person of whom they spoke. She was tall and slender, with dancing eyes of midnight blackness, which well matched the dark, glossy ringlets flowing in profusion over her shapely shoulders. Her costume betokened the country rather than the court, yet its lack of fashion, able cut or texture was not noticed in a company of men, and the almost universal gaze of admiration that rested on her showed that in the eyes of the majority she was well and tastefully garbed.

"My lord of Stratford," she said in a sweet, clear voice, "I crave a word with you in private."

De Courcy laughed provokingly; the others remained silent, but turned their regard from the interloper to the earl, whose frown of annoyance did not disappear as it had done before. Stratford spoke no word, but his underlings were quick to interpret and act upon his black look. Two attendants silently took place beside the girl, ready to seize her did his lordship give a sign. The huntsmen let loose the dogs that had been snarling at the newcomer. They made a dash at her, while she sprang nimbly to the tree that had concealed her, having first whisked from the scabbard of an astonished attendant the light sword with which he was supposed to guard himself or his master.

"Call off your hounds, you villain!" she cried in a voice that had the true ring of command in it. Indeed, to many there the order had a touch of the earl's own tones in anger. "I ask not for my own escape from death, but for theirs. I'd rather transmute a man than hurt a dog. You scoundrel, you shall feel the sting of this point if you do not instantly obey."

IN THE BISHOP'S CARRIAGE

By MIRIAM MICHELSON

(Copyright, 1904, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company.)

CHAPTER XVII.
HILADELPHIA, Jan. 27.—Maggie, dear: I'm writing to you just before dinner, while I wait for Fred. He's down at the box office looking up advance sales. I tell you, Maggie, we're strictly in it—we Obermullers. That Broadway bit of mine has preceded me here, and we've got the town, I suspect, in advance.

But I'm not writing to tell you this. I've got something more interesting to tell you, my dear old Cruelly. I want you to pretend to yourself that you see me, Mag, as I came out of the big Chestnut street store this afternoon, my arms full of bundles. I must have on that long coat to my heels, of dark, warm, silk-lined, with the long, incurving back sweep and high chinchilla collar, that Fred ordered made for me the very day we were married. I must be wearing that jolly little, red-velvet toque caught up on the side with some of the fur.

Oh, yes, I knew I was more than a year behind the times when I got them, but a successful actress wears what she pleases, and the rest of the world wears what pleases her, too. Besides, fashions don't mean so much to you when your husband tells you how becoming—but this has nothing to do with the bishop.

Yes, the bishop, Mag! I had just said, "Nance Olden—" To myself I still speak to me as Nancy Olden; it's good for me, Mag; keeps me humble and forever grateful that I'm so happy. "Nance, you'll never be able to carry all these things and lift your bulky train, too. And there's never a hansom round when it's snowing and—"

And then I caught sight of the carriage. Yes, Maggie, the same fat, low, comfortable, elegant, sober carriage, wide and well-kept, with rubber-tired wheels. And the two heavy horses, fat and elegant and sober, too, and wide and well-kept. I know whose it was the minute my eyes lighted on it, and I couldn't—I just couldn't resist it.

The man on the box—still wide and well-kept—was wide-awake this time. I nodded to him as I slipped in and closed the door after me. "I'll wait for the bishop," I said, with a red-coated assurance that left him no alternative but to accept the situation respectfully.

"Oh, dear, dear!" It was soft and warm inside as it had been that long, long-ago day. The seat was wide and roomy. The cushions had been done over—I resented that—but though a different material, they were a still darker plum. And instead of "Que Vadis," the bishop had been reading "Resurrection."

I took it up and glanced over it as I sat there; but, you know, Mag, the heavy-weight plays never appealed to me. I don't go in for the tragic—perhaps I saw too much of the real thing when I was little.

At any rate, it seemed dull to me, and I put it aside and sat there absent-mindedly dreaming of a little girl, that I knew once when—when the handle of the door turned and the bishop got in, and we were off.

Oh, the little bishop—the contrast between him and the fat, pompous rig caught me! He seemed littler and leaner than ever, his little white beard scantier, his soft eye kinder, and his soft heart—

"God bless my soul!" he exclaimed, jumped almost out of his seat little boots, while he looked sharply over his spectacles.

What did he see? Just a red-coated ghost dreaming in the corner of his carriage. It made him doubt his eyes—his sanity. I don't know what he'd have done if that warm red ghost hadn't got tired of dreaming, and laughed outright.

"Daddy," I murmured, sleepily. Oh, that little ramrod of a bishop! The blood rushed up under his clear, thin, baby-like skin and he sat up straight and solemn and awful—awful as such a tiny bishop could be.

"I fear, miss, you have made a mistake," he said, primly. I looked at him steadily. "You know I haven't," I said, gently. That took some of the starch out of him, but he eyed me suspiciously.

"Why don't you ask me where I got the coat, Bishop Van Wageningen?" I said, leaning over to him. He started. I suppose he'd just that moment remembered my leaving it behind that day at Mrs. Ramsay's.

"Lord bless me!" he cried, anxiously. "You haven't—you haven't again!"

"No, I haven't." Ah, Maggie, dear, it was worth a lot to me to be able to say that "no" to him. "It was given to me. Guess who gave it to me?" He shook his head.

"My husband!"

Maggie Monahan, he didn't even blink. Perhaps in the bishop's set husbands are not uncommon, or very likely they don't know what a husband like Fred Obermuller means.

"I congratulate you, my child, or—"

or did it—were you—"

"Why, I'd never seen Fred Obermuller then," I cried. "Can't you tell a difference, bishop?" I pleaded. "Don't I look like a—an imposing married woman now? Don't I seem a bit—oh, just a bit nicer?"

His eyes twinkled as he bent to look more closely at me.

"You look—you look, my little girl, exactly like the pretty, big-eyed, wheedling-voiced child I wished to have for my own daughter."

"Tell me now, my dear, is there any—"

for you? I have an engagement near here and we may not meet again. I can't hope to find you in my carriage many more times. You are happy—you are living worthily, child? Pardon me, but the stage—"

Oh, the gentle courtesy of his manner! I loved his solicitude. Father-hungry girls like us, Maggie, know how to value a thing like that.

"You know," I said, slowly, "the thing that keeps a woman straight and a man faithful is not a matter of bricks and mortar nor ways of thinking nor habits of living. It's something finer and stronger than these. It's the magic taboo of her love for him and for her that makes them—sacred. With that to guard them—why—"

WEEKLY REVIEW FROM NEW YORK MARKETS

What Was Done in Trade During the Past Seven Days—Business Good.

New York, July 21, 1905.—The market was a waiting one, a period of quiescence after the unusual activity of the past six weeks. Some specialties advanced. Others were neglected. U. S. Rubber common scored a sharp gain under the impetus of large and increasing earnings and the probability of a dividend in the near future. American Woolen common reflected the company's excellent sales reports for the new fiscal year, notwithstanding an advance in prices of woolen goods. Among the railroad shares, the Hill stocks alone made substantial gains and the buying seemed to be of the investment character. National Biscuit common, in spite of large earnings, declined sharply. Many timid shareholders liquidating their holdings because of the receipt of anonymous circulars from a former employee. The Pittsburg Coal Co., as had been expected, passed the dividend on its preferred stock, and the stock declined sharply in consequence. It is probable, however, that influential stockholders may demand an investigation of the company's affairs. The general list showed a sagging tendency after a display of strength early in the week, and this was intensified on Thursday by the first crop scare of the season in reports of crop damage in South Dakota and Minnesota. There was profit taking in Union Pacific, Illinois Central and Amalgamated, on the declaration of increased dividends, and the week closed with prices generally at recessions, but without liquidation from large holders of stocks. There was a disposition in evidence throughout the week to await the outcome of the crops.

Nothing is clearer today than that general business conditions and prospects are excellent. The long-delayed movement in pig iron has arrived and for the first time in two months the pig iron market is active at advancing prices. Heavy lines of steel are in unabated demand, and premiums for delivery will become more common in the next few weeks. A better feeling prevails in the lighter grades of finished steel. Illustrative of the stability of the steel situation, it is worth while remembering that the Steel Corporation in the first six months of the year earned the full year's interest charges, depreciation allowances and the dividend on the preferred stock, and the balance of the year promises even better.

An exception to general prosperity is the bituminous coal trade, and this is largely local in effect. The recent spell of hot weather meant an enormous traffic for the local surface traction lines. There is no longer a question that the regular subway traffic and new business created by the additional transportation facilities, but for the floating traffic a counterpoise has been created between the surface lines on the one hand and the Subway and Elevated on the other, by which, according to the season, the Metropolitan of Interborough draws an abnormal percentage. The Subway earnings were greater in the winter months, and in the Spring when the weather was inclement. With the hot weather passengers deserted the Subway for the surface cars, the result being that the earnings of the Metropolitan will be by far the greatest on record. The company bids fair in time to earn even more than its seven per cent dividend, and the stocks of both the Metropolitan Street Railway and the Metropolitan Securities Co. look cheap at present figures.

That the prices of the active stocks have advanced an average of seven points during June and July is sufficient in itself to impress upon the mind the necessity for caution during the remaining summer months. In only three years in the last thirty has such a condition confronted us, and it must be remembered that reports of damage to the growing crops are periodic, but nevertheless temporarily very real influences on prices. It is of course, significant of the ultimate outcome that the leading railroads are placing steel orders on the basis of large harvests, and barring the unexpected, large crops are assured, but August is the crucial month, and it is then that there is determined whether it is to be another year of prosperity of a year of slackened business. We are certain to have crop scares, and crop scares mean lower prices. But they also mean bargains should the outcome be favorable. The purchaser of standard shares on recessions from this level will find his holdings much more valuable once the crops are harvested and the period of tight money passed.

PARIS FASHION NOTES.

Linen continues the smart summer fabric, sans peur et sans reproche. The unprecedented favor which it enjoys must certainly be the source of much gratification to the coteries of countenances who were insistent in putting it forward even before the beginning of the summer season.

It follows naturally that a fabric with such an extensive vogue should be the target of great variation, and even Dame Fashion's disciples, who each season grow more exacting, find themselves astounded at the limitless beauty of the material par excellence of the season.

Prisoners of war are never spared in Morocco; they are beheaded, as are the wounded foes, and their heads placed on the walls in cities as a warning example.

The first one of which there is any record, was drilled in Europe, in the Province of Artois, France, and has been flowing continuously since A. D. 1126. In the United States the first well was drilled in 1893. The present largest and most remarkable flowing well region is in the Pecos Valley of New Mexico.

Baseball Leagues on Increase

Founding of National Organization In 1876 Was Start of Movement That Has No Limit --- Network of Leagues Now Covers Country.

The league idea, which originated in baseball in 1876, in a short time proved its advantages so thoroughly, that it is not surprising to find smaller organizations copying its general plan of operation. Nor was it very astonishing that the National league should in time find itself confronted by opposition owing to the increase of population and the demand of other cities than those in the National league for baseball that was up to the National league standard or approximately near it.

Eventually there came into existence a very powerful league known as the American association, and it based part of its claim for public patronage upon a reduced gate admission. The owners of the National league clubs had maintained that it was impossible to furnish first class baseball at an admission fee of less than 50 cents. The heavy expenses to which clubs were subjected, both for travel and salaries to players, and the fact that not all the cities in their circuit were of sufficient population to warrant large crowds, especially when the club was losing, were offered as arguments for the higher gate fee.

The next most important rival which the National league was compelled to face was the Union association. Its backers after one year, which almost ruined them financially, were glad enough to give up the fight. Then came the Brotherhood league in 1890, an organization in which the players were to be co-operative beneficiaries. It took just a season to prove the fallacy of that plan.

The American association went to pieces in 1901, and the National league had everything its own way as the major league of the country until 1901, when open war was declared by the American league, an organization springing from the Western league, and after two years of bitter fighting peace terms were agreed upon, and the National league recognized the American as a major organization. Both today are in existence and both as reasonably prosperous as can be expected in a professional sport which requires success of individual teams to insure large financial returns.

RED TAG SALE

---REMARKABLE---

Turkish Towel Bargain

We were fortunate enough to secure a case of manufacturer's seconds. The Towels offered Wednesday are extra large and extra heavy. A full bleached Turkish bath towel, size 24 by 54 inches, worth if perfect, 35c.

Let us emphasize the size of these Towels.—They are a yard and a half long and not a regular quarter towel but the 35c size. There are imperfect spots in them, but cut these out and still have a good towel left. Or cut them up in wash rags. The price we make tomorrow will warrant it.
